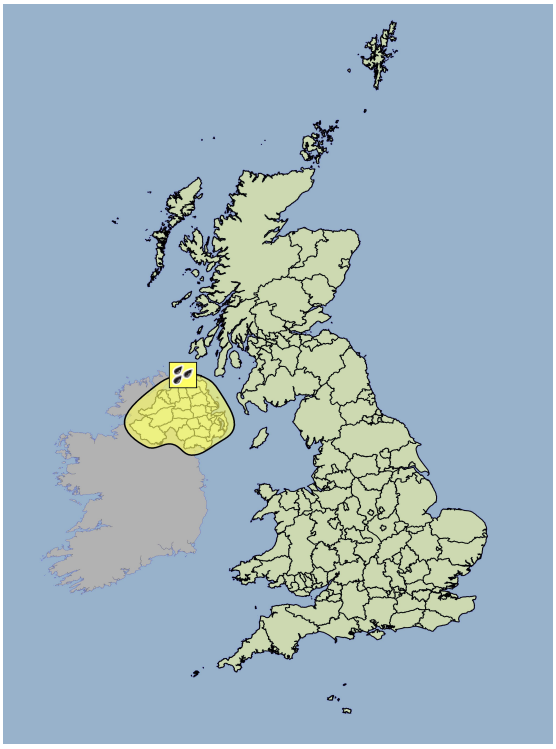
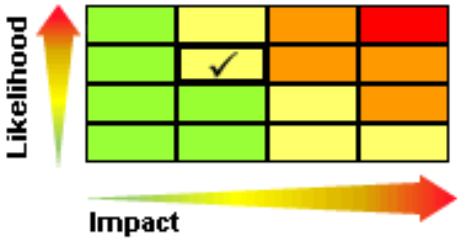
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Heavy and thundery showers today are likely to give 10 mm of rain in an hour in places, and could linger in some spots resulting in 20 to 30 mm in just a few hours. This may give rise to some surface water flooding.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 12:00 on Tue, 10th Jun 2014 until 21:00 on Tue, 10th Jun 2014

Heavy showers and thunderstorms will become more widespread again across Northern Ireland this afternoon. These may become slow-moving in places, with potential for some localised flooding. The showers will then die away again this evening.
